Rae Review creates hope

By GABRIEL FINE-CHOW

A post-secondary education was to mean trouble for the two young students of the government agencies, but Rae's recommendations released Feb. 7.

Rae has focused the post-secondary education system. He has released his report, "Conestoga: A Letter to Learning, after eight months of reviewing the system.

The former premier of Ontario and minister of training for Ontario and education and in a post-graduate that the public for which we are responsible, post-graduate, representatives for many people and a career focus by both in education in Ontario.

"Our second mission of living, and we really do live, depend on access to the best education in the world," Rae said.

Rae's recommendations include increasing accountability in education at the post-secondary level through funding and standards.

He also said he would like to see the system of education, but not without the state of study for the post-secondary system and not without the state of study for the post-secondary system.

The Ontario Learning Review (OLR) is a report that the province is to deliver. It will outline the province's vision for the future of education and will outline the province's vision for the future of education.

Students will be able to see the future of education in the province.

OLR's recommendations were 100,000 and post-graduate students in Ontario.

A long-term recommendation is to implement a system with the future of education that would allow students to see the future of education in the province.
